

Stitch and paint your own banners at Southern Exposure this Saturday.

Weekend Go-Tos for January 13, 2017

By Ashleyanne Krigbaum
January 13, 2017

It's MLK weekend, and the Bay Area is celebrating with many events to help better connect us to each other and to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s legacy.

Bring along your paints, brushes, fabric scraps, and ideas to dismantle unjust regimes to "Resistance is Fruitful" a drop-in workshop to help you create your own banners and posters and other methods of visual resistance. They'll provide sewing machines and supplies, plus representatives from local civil justice organizations will be on-hand to share best practices too. "Resistance is Fruitful" happens tomorrow, 12:00 to 5:00 p.m. at Southern Exposure on 20th Street in San Francisco.

Stitch and paint your own banners at Southern Exposure this Saturday.

On Monday, the African American Museum & Library in Oakland will screen four films documenting African American struggles for civil rights, including "Black Americans Since MLK: And Still I Rise" and "The Black Panthers: Vanguard of the Revolution." The Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Film Festival begins at 11:00 a.m. at 659 14th Street in Oakland.

Monday night, young poets and writers will take to the stage of the Nourse Theater for the annual celebration of Martin Luther King Jr. presented by Youth Speaks. This year's event is inspired by Dr. King's seminal speech and text "Where Do We Go From Here: Chaos or Community?" The show begins at 7:00 p.m., and you can find tickets at youthspeaks.org.
3030 20th Street San Francisco, CA 94110 Phone: 415/863-2141 Fax: 415/863-1841 www.soex.org

Is there an event happening this weekend that you'd like folks to know about? Feel free to add it below in the comments section.

Young Gifted & Black performing at the 2015 Youth Speaks celebration of MLK. Photo